

Abstract

An adapter for reducing echo and noise in internet telephony for use with personal computers. The device employs analog circuitry to provide signal filters and delay 5 which act together to reduce line induced echo and background noise, thus providing a clear voice communication channel. The device is readily inserted between standard microphones and speakers employed in the personal computer.

Patent Application